

Eric Blumer has been Honeywell Aerospace director in Advanced Technology since 2010 responsible for Propulsion, APU and ECS Technology Development supporting both Military and Commercial markets. Responsibilities include all internally and externally funded technology programs supporting these multi-billion dollar product lines. Eric has been at Honeywell for over 30 years performing roles including new centerline certifications of APU and Propulsion products. He has also had P&L business roles in ECS and Electric Power. Eric has published a number of industry technical papers, and has 16 US patents or patent applications.